Mrs. Caraway Wins Nomination, Pace Forces Vanquished

Widow of Senator Nominated on Speech by W. S. Atkins, of Hope

SHE IS ACCLAIMED

Frank Pace's Attempt May Affect Gubernatorial Contest

LITTLE ROCK.—(AP)—Mrs. Hattie W. Caraway, of Jonesboro, was nominated without opposition for the unexpired term of her husband-senator, by the Democratic State Central Committee here late Tuesday.

Frank Pace, Little Rock attorney and partner of the late Senator Jeff Davis, failed to "show."

Mrs. Caraway's nomination was made unanimous after supporters of Frank Pace, Little Rock lawyer and "silent" candidate for the nomination, had failed in an effort to gain votes by means of a secret ballot and after Hurley Culpepper of Pine Bluff, Pace adherent, had been defeated for membership on the committee by Jo Nichol of Pine Bluff, nominated as a Caraway supporter. Mr. Pace's name was not mentioned during the committee's proceedings.

The motion that the committee vote on all question by unsigned ballot was defeated, 19 to 14. This was considered the first test of strength. A minute later Mr. Nichols was elected, 20 to 13.

Pate Forces Checked

These two reverses for the Pace faction apparently were accepted by his supporters as an indication that they had no chance to win the nomination, but the alertness of the Caraway adherents and the smoothness with which they handled the situation forestalled the Pace faction in an effort to gain a tactical advantage by demanding that the committee refuse to make a nomination and order a special primary election.

When the result of the vote on the Nichol-Culpepper contest was announced by Chairman Lamar Williamson, W. S. Atkins of Hope and Dr. W. H. Abington of Beebe sought recognition, but Mr. Atkins was a split-second ahead of the White county senator, who held his wife's proxy.

Mr. Williamson recognized Mr. Atkins and the latter made an eloquent appeal in behalf of Mrs. Caraway in placing her name in nomination.

Atkins Makes Nomination

When applause of spectators had subsided at the conclusion of Mr. Atkins' nominating address, Dr. Abington was recognized and began what many in the audience believed was a nominating address in behalf of Mr. Pace. But he announced that he was opposed to the committee nominating any person and offered a resolution that the committee go on record as favoring a special primary to select a party nominee.

After a short debate this motion was defeated, 20 to 5, and Henry Armstrong of Fort Smith moved that nominations be closed. Mayor Herbert Bosler of Jonesboro then moved that the chairman instruct the secretary to cast the committee's vote for Mrs. Caraway and that the records show that she was nominated by acclamation.

The secret ballot motion was made by R. W. Robbins of Conway and was seconded by Senator Creed Caldwell of Pine Bluff, after Mr. Nichol had been nominated by Mrs. Bessie N. Florence of Hot Springs for the committee vacancy from the Eleventh Judicial Circuit, resulting from the death several months ago of E. J. Kerwin of Pine Bluff, and after Senator Caldwell had nominated Mr. Culpepper.

The proposal was opposed vigorously by Mr. Atkins, Hope and by Harvey G. Combs of Little Rock, assistant secretary of the committee, who held the proxy of Secretary J. H. Andrews of Wynne.

Political Forecast

LITTLE ROCK.—In a front page story speculating on the political effects of the nomination of Mrs. Caraway, the Arkansas Gazette said Wednesday:

One of the arguments advanced by supporters of Mrs. Caraway was that she would not seek the office for a full term, thus leaving all aspirants free to make the race without having to overcome the handicap of opposing an incumbent.

Governor Farnell, who was urged by some of his political advisers to seek the short term nomination, dismissed the proposal with the announcement of Mrs. Caraway's appointment to fill the vacancy temporarily pending the holding of a special election January 12, and with the further announcement that he would urge the state Central Committee to nominate her for the unexpired term.

Nashville-Hope to Battle For Honor

Postponed Thanksgiving Game to Begin at 7:30 p. m.

A Thanksgiving Day football battle, postponed because of inclement weather, will be played here at 7:30 p. m. Wednesday between Hope and Nashville high schools. The game will be played under the lights at Hope high school and will be the last contest of the season for both teams.

The gridiron was soaked by a continuous rain, but with sunshine and a cold wind prevailing Tuesday afternoon the field is expected to be dried somewhat by Wednesday night.

Hope will have its strongest lineup to pit against the visiting Scorpions and Coach Charles Wilkin hopes to see his Bobcats really go in their final game of the season. Hope's line will average 167 pounds, the backfield will average 151 pounds and the team 161 pounds.

From Nashville will come a team that, though its record of seven victories and two defeats, that will be quite a favorite to whip the Bobcats, but since the game is a traditional event, it is expected to be close and hard fought.

While Hope has won two games during the season, Nashville has lost but two, both by close scores to Gurdon and Prescott. Nashville defeated Blains, 26 to 0; defeated Lockesburg, 13 to 0; defeated Murrefreesboro, 45 to 0; defeated Bradley, 51 to 0; lost to Gurdon, 13 to 7; lost to Prescott, 15 to 7; defeated Malvern, 26 to 0; defeated Benton, 6 to 0; defeated Dierks 45 to 0.

Coach Lester Bradley of Nashville is undecided about several positions on his team. Either Lewis or Yount, both tipping the scales at 175 pounds, will play at right guard; Brown, a 135-pounder or Robertson, a 140-pounder, at right halfback, and either Payne, 150-pounder, or Watkins, 145-pounder, at left halfback.

smart political move by refusing to consider becoming candidate for the short term and by using his influence in behalf of Mrs. Caraway.

Many persons attribute her nomination by the committee to the untiring efforts of Governor Parnell and his friends, and these observers contend that the governor's potential strength as a senatorial aspirant was greatly enhanced by Mrs. Caraway's nomination.

Persons holding contrary views pointed out that several other factors, including co-operation of persons who might oppose Governor Parnell as a candidate for the Senate, contributed largely to Mr. Caraway's victory before the comm.

May Affect Governor's Race

Politicians Tuesday night were trying to ascertain the status of the so-called Pace-Davis-Blackwood faction following its overwhelming defeat in the state Central Committee meeting yesterday. It had been talked around hotel lobbies and published in some papers that merger of the political interests of Dwight H. Blackwood, chairman of the state Highway Commission, who is considered a likely candidate for governor, and of the Pace-Davis group was the beginning of a new political alignment which would accentuate the break between Governor Parnell and Mr. Blackwood.

It had been reported for several months that there had been a disagreement between the governor and the Highway Commission chairman, but the break was brought into the open during the recent special session of the legislature when that body was deadlocked for nearly two weeks over provisions of a highway audit bill, with the governor favoring passage of an act to strengthen the law enacted at the 1931 regular session, and Mr. Blackwood opposing certain provisions of the proposed amendatory measure on the ground that it was an effort of political opponents to "crucify" him, and to prevent him from running for any office he might desire to seek.

Governor Parnell has not publicly revealed his intentions concerning the senatorial race next summer, but many of his friends believe that he is certain to seek the nomination.

Ragon Mentioned Also

Congressman Heartill Hagon has been mentioned as a probable candidate and he has taken cognizance of the situation by announcing that at the proper time he will make known his intentions.

Associate Justice W. F. Kirby, a former United States senator, also took cognizance of the fact that he had been mentioned as a probable candidate.

Diplomat With Hand Of Steel Leads Rail Men In Wage Fight

CLEVELAND.—(P)—A hand of steel in a glove of silk. Such is the hand of D. B. Robertson, president of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Firemen and Enginemen, who as chairman of the labor forces wrote the statement at the close of the negotiations between railway and labor executives signaling the opening of a battle over wages.

Diplomatic, cultured, a polished gentleman, Robertson represents the aristocratic school of the labor movement, yet he came up the avenue of toil and hard knocks.

In his fights he has resorted to diplomatic methods and employed argument and persuasion to win his point, yet when diplomacy failed he has been as inflexible as a bar of steel.

The brotherhood chief quit school at the age of 12 to go to work in a Youngstown bolt works. He worked in brick yards and machine shops. He eked out an education from night schools and by correspondence. Polish was added by reading.

In 1895 he began his railroading as an engine wiper for the Pennsylvania and climbed as hostler, fireman and engineer for the Erie until 1912.

Meanwhile he was working his way up in brotherhood circles. After serving as chairman of the grievance committee on the Erie, in 1913 he became vice-president of the organization.

Now 55 years old, he has served as president since 1922. The firemen and enginemen never have been split by internal strife. When internal trouble threatens, Robertson resorts to diplomacy.

Robertson has been uniformly successful in his fight for higher wages and better working conditions. Ground gained has never been surrendered. From that standpoint he is known among labor men as a "last stand fighter."

So in the negotiations with the railway presidents' committee, the railway labor executives' association proposed stabilization of employment for one year, the six-hour day and a billion dollar grade separation program.

Wage reductions, which railway executives were hopeful would be voluntarily offered, were not mentioned.

Chicago Follies Begin Engagement

Chess Davis, Star in This Traveling Road Show, Now in Hope

Something new in songs, steps and side splitting comedy is assured Hope audiences when the Chicago Follies is presented at the Saenger for a limited engagement on Wednesday as the special feature stage attraction.

This show brings two famous black-face comedians. Chess Davis has been the star of his own attractions for many years and Gene "Honey Gal" Cobb was featured with Neil O'Brien's Minstrels. Either of these famous funsters is an assurance of an evening cram full of laughs. Both of them in one show is a positive guarantee of more hilarity than has ever been jammed into one offering.

The Chicago Follies is also cram full of diversified talent.

Ivena Baker presents the same rhythm dances that attracted critical attention to her in the Vanities and Marx Brothers Coconut in New York. Dolly Taylor, the other "It" girl is a delineator of jazz that is different. Buddy Ryan offers melody and dances.

They are Milder

— and here's how they get that way!

The mildest cigarette is bound to be the one that's made of the mildest tobaccos. It's harder to find the milder varieties—but we pay the price and get the choice. The world's finest Turkish—the world's finest Domestic—the purest, mildest and best tobacco that grows—that's what we buy for Chesterfield.

We tie up millions of dollars ageing these tobaccos right. Then we blend and cross-blend them for extra mildness and taste. Good—they've got to be good!

Everything that money, science and skill can do to make a milder cigarette shows up with every puff. A cigarette can't be made any milder or purer—you can smoke as many as you like. And you'll like as many as you smoke. Chesterfields TASTE BETTER and THEY SATISFY!

A Curb Market

A PROGRAM this newspaper has had in mind the last several months is the establishing of a Curb Market for the quick and efficient handling of locally-grown produce.

What brought the idea home to us this week was the complaint of a well known Hope matron, who said that poultry and farm produce came a good deal cheaper uptown than when bought from the individual farmer making his house-to-house canvass.

What the lady had discovered, of course, was the honorable old law of trade and barter which permits us to levy what the traffic will bear.

A sale from the farmer to the housewife is an individual transaction. Uptown, however, the farmers circulating among the stores and cafes create a sort of informal Curb Market where almost every deal is as public as though the deals of it were shouted down the street. The effect of any public market is, like the effect of newspaper advertisements, to make living cheaper through the power of exposed prices.

The Curb Market aims to cut the housewife in on just those trade advantages which produce-men formerly enjoyed among themselves.

That there is an advantage here for everybody, stands reason, because every big American city has a Curb Market dating back almost to Colonial history. The chief aim of such a market is to reverse the old huckster habit, and, instead of compelling the farmer to tour the entire town while selling a few dozen chickens, create a central shopping place and bring the housewife there.

The establishing of a Curb Market is long over-due in Hope. The city owes it to its farm friends in this and adjoining counties, for it means a larger and steadier cash income to the farmer. The city owes it to itself, for the Curb Market makes living cheaper without costing any man a dime's worth of business he enjoyed formerly. Money that the farmer gets for greenstuffs and poultry sold to housewives at the Curb Market he himself spends with the grocery-men and butcher before he gets home again.

Our main experience with observing Curb Markets was the one at El Dorado, which the News of that city helped establish. As we recall, the market financed itself, a charge of 25 to 35 cents a stall on the various farmers eventually rearing the cost of construction.

It was a simple frame structure, consisting only of a roof and open sides—and it operated three times a week, grossing sometimes as much as a thousand dollars a session.
Nothing that we recall was of more lasting benefit to El Dorado than its Curb Market; and it is our idea to round up a committee of representative Hope citizens in the near future and visit some of the Curb Markets elsewhere in the state before advocating plans for our own.

Columbus' Maps

IT IS interesting to learn that the map which Christopher Columbus used on his third voyage to America has come to light in a Turkish museum, and will shortly be given to the world.

There is a world of romance in maps, especially in very old ones; and the map which carries great blank spaces along its borders, indicating that the cartographer did not know what lay behind the horizon, can call forth endless dreams.

That, of course, was the kind of map Columbus used.
On his first voyage maps were of little use to him. He expected to fetch up against the Asiatic coastline somewhere, and he probably had such charts of China, Malaya and India as 15th century Spain could provide. But all the way thither was as mysterious and unknown as the other side of the moon. What good is a map to a man who charts a course due west into a shoreless sea?

By the time he made his third trip, of course, he probably had a more or less makeshift set of charts. He knew at least, that sooner or later he would make a more or less familiar landfall. Somewhere ahead there were islands and channels he had seen before.

But all the rest was darkness. To the north and south stretched almost infinite reaches of empty ocean, which might conceal anything from the lost Atlantis to the Happy Isles that Ulysses sailed for. What, one wonders, did the old navigator think, what sort of speculation took hold of him, as he sat in his dim-lit, creaking cabin, a chair braced against the bulkhead for security, and studied his incomplete map?

We shall never know, of course. Sea-faring men are seldom communicative, and Columbus was no exception. But since that is a closed book, the next best thing is a glimpse at the map he used; and the man who could not pore over it by the hour, lost in dreams, has no appreciation of romance.

One trouble with our world today, you see, is that our maps are too complete. Around the poles there are dwindling white spaces, and Asia and South America still have small areas that are unknown. But for the most part every head-land has been charted, every Mountain range has been filled in, every river bed has been traced. What wouldn't we give for a map that was half empty!

How One Woman
Lost 47 Lbs. of Fat

In Three Months and Feels Years Younger

"I have been taking Kruschen Salts for nearly 3 months. I have continued taking one teaspoonful in warm water every morning. I then weighed 217 pounds, was always bothered with pains in my back and lower part of abdomen and sides.

"Now I am glad to say I am a well woman, feel much stronger, years younger and my weight is 170 pounds.
I do not only feel better but I look better, so all my friends say."

A bottle of Kruschen Salts that last 4 weeks costs but 85 cents at Bryant's
Drug Store or John S. Gibson Drug Co., and druggists the world over.
Take one half teaspoon in a glass of hot water every morning before breakfast.

Attention to diet will help—cut out pastry and fatty meats—go light on potatoes, butter, cream and sugar—the Kruschen way is the safe way to lose fat. Try one bottle and if not joyfully satisfied—money back. Adv.

Lafayette Woman All Year Gardner

Mrs. T. R. LeMay Sponsors Live-at-Home Program

Mrs. T. R. LeMay, a member of the Riverside home demonstration club in Lafayette county has thoroughly convinced her friends and neighbors that the home garden plays a very important part in the live-at-home program, states Miss Ruby Mendenhall, extension economist in food preservation, University of Arkansas College of Agriculture.

Last winter Mrs. LeMay was selected as the county garden demonstrator for Lafayette county. Her report shows that she was serving four vegetables, mustard, onions, lettuce and turnips, from her garden in January. Quite early in the spring she started her early tomato, pepper and cabbage plants in a hot bed. A little later she planted other vegetables in the open. Just as soon as one crop was harvested she replanted the ground and in this way kept all of her small garden plot producing throughout the entire year. She says all the land in her garden grew at least two crops this year and much of it grew four.

During the year she has had 22 different varieties of vegetables growing in her garden. On June 20 the first ripe tomatoes were served on her table and they have been available every day since that date.

Mrs. LeMay's garden has done much to keep down the grocery bill this year, by not allowing anything to go to waste. She says "I dispose of my garden products in three ways: home consumption, canning, and marketing the surplus. The largest portion was used at home. Most of our food supply came from my garden. I used the canning budget and filled my pantry shelves with vegetables and fruits to supply plenty for my table through the winter months."

Mrs. LeMay's pantry shelves are full of a good supply of big variety and excellent quality canned foods. She started working on her canning budget just as soon as her vegetables were ready to use and she canned the products when they were in prime condition for use. In addition to her canned food she has stored in bags and boxes, 40 pounds of dried lima beans, 2 bushels peas, 5 bushels of onions, 16 bushels of Irish potatoes and one peck of shelled pop-corn that were produced right in her garden. She has also dried peaches in her store room. Mrs. LeMay did all her own canning and helped several of her neighbors with their canning too.

When there was a surplus of fresh vegetables after the canning was done, she sold it to the people on the farm, totals amounting to $25.05. There are several large fig trees in Mrs. LeMay's garden that furnished all the figs needed for her preserves. There are no weeds growing around the garden fence, but instead there are zenias, chrysanthemums and dahlias blooming profusely.

1500 Being Fattened in the Community for Christmas

Approximately 900 head of turkeys, tipping the scales at slightly more than 11,000 pounds were marketed from Blevins prior to Thanksgiving according to M. L. Nelson shipper of produce.

Most of the turkeys sold for this holiday were shipped to Little Rock, although many small orders were expressed or trucked to other towns in the state. Several individual birds were sold to private families who called in Blevins for them.

According to Mr. Nelson there are about 1500 head of turkeys left in the community. These are being prepared for the Christmas trade. It is expected that the demand for Christmas turkeys will be greater than was the Thanksgiving trade.

Several growers plan to expand their operations next year. One grower who had 400 head this year plans to raise 1000 head next year and several others will materially increase their flocks.

Scenic Beauty Is Basis for Court Suit

Million Dollar Battle Looms Over Waters of Lake

JEFFERSON CITY, Mo. — (AP) — A million dollar legal battle over a question of scenic beauty, has begun in federal court here with former Senator James A. Reed, Kansas City, as an attorney, and Gutzon Borglum, famous sculptor, as a witness.

The question is whether waters of the "Lake of the Ozarks" newly formed by the building of a $30,000,000 hydro-electric dam at Bagnell, Mo., has ruined or improved Mahanoka, a beauty spot of the Missouri Ozarks, owned by the estate of the wealthy Snyder family.

Hahatonka, once adjudged the most beautiful scenic spot in Missouri, was a mountainous tract of land, threaded with rivers and brooks, but now is partly submerged by the waters from the new dam built by the Union Electric company, St. Louis, which is defending the suit for $10,000,000 damages, brought by the Snyder estate.

D. L. Paisley Buys 1½ Tons Turkeys

Hempstead County Firm Sells Second Order to Former Hope Man

D. L. Paisley, for many years connected with the Hope schools for the past two years has been superintendent of the Arkansas Hospital for Nervous Diseases. During the two years that Mr. Paisley has been in Little Rock he has bought the Thanksgiving turkeys for the institution from a Hempstead county firm, M. L. Nelson & Company of Blevins.

This season, 240 birds were taken to Little Rock, by truck for the holiday feast. The order for this shipment called for 3000 pounds or a ton and a half of turkeys for one meal. They were delivered alive and killed and dressed by a force of workers from the institution to which they were sold.

Mr. Paisley spent many years in Hope at the head of the local schools and is considered one among the best school men in the state. He left here after being named manager for the state organization with which he is now connected. Hope citizens were sorry to have him leave.

M. L. Nelson of Blevins in speaking of the pleasant business transactions between he and Mr. Paisley for the past two years said, that the former school man "Knows where to buy his turkeys."

Mix, A Bold Adventurer

Hero to Millions of Small Boys of a few years ago who are big boys now is Tom Mix, shown here with his famous horse, Tony. The scene at the upper left is taken from one of his early movie thrillers of the silent-film days.

HOLLYWOOD.—The idol of Young America for more than a decade, Tom Mix has known hero worship as few others living have.

And Mix, his friends say, tried honestly to live up to the small boy's conception of him as the dashing screen hero, and the resourceful conqueror of western villains.

Mix's life has been one not so far different from the types he played on the screen.

Born in El Paso county, Texas, on January 6, 1880, he soon began his career of adventure and thrills when he joined the U. S. army in time to serve as a scout during the Spanish-American war.

Service in the Philippines and China followed, after which Mix found army life to tame and join the British forces in time to take part in the siege of Ladysmith in the Boer War in South Africa.

When Madero raised the banner of revolution in Mexico, Mix was on hand to help in the taking of Juarez, and he narrowly missed getting shot by a Mexican firing squad for his pains.

The story goes that just as a Nationalistic firing squad was ready to shoot the captured rebel, a body of Madrona troops came up and saved the cowboy. Three years in the Texas Rangers and then a year as deputy U. S. marshal at Twin Buttes, Col., completed his military career. Fourteen buckshot were taken from his back after he had been fired on by Mexican horse thieves at Twin Buttes.

Tom Mix got this first job in the movies purely by accident. While he was deputy marshal at Twin Buttes, he happened to ride to a ranch where a battery of movie cameras were shooting a cowboy scene.

Mix had won the national roping and riding contest for cowboys at Prescott, Arizona, the previous year, and admitted that he was "a pretty good cow hand" at the time.

Interested, he asked if the movie scene was a private party, and being answered in the negative, he proceeded to rope, bulldog and tie a steer in 16 seconds.

During the period from 1910, when he made his first picture, to 1925, Tom Mix and his famous horse "Tony" were unquestionably the screen's greatest drawing cards in the smaller cities and towns which form the major portion of the American movie audience.

Mix drew the remarkable salary of $17,000 per week, and at one time his estate was estimated at more than $5,000,000. He built a "million dollar cabin" as he called it, in Hollywood, and proceeded to be miserable in it.

Butlers and valets and chauffeurs and waxed floors were endured by the western star, but they were never really accepted by him.

Butlers and valets and chauffeurs and waxed floors were endured by the western star, but they were never really accepted by him.

He told of one amusing incident which illustrates the way he felt toward his new mode of living.

"High-heel boots weren't made for polished floors, and I slipped down as I came in the door," he said. "Go on and laugh, I said to the butler when I noticed him holding his hand over his mouth. 'I'm just trying to be entertaining.'"

The affection between Tom Mix and Tony is not a creation of movie press agents. Mix bought the pony for $18, and thought of him almost as of a child.

One of Mix's cowpuncher friends once asked him why he didn't insure the horse for $500,000, since he was such a vital part of the screen star's drawing power.

"Well, have you got your kid insured?" Mix fired back. "Money couldn't take Tony's place any more than it could a kid's place."

The only thing in Hollywood which Mix really loved was his work.

And the thing which appealed to him most about that was the constant danger and the thrills which came from narrow escapes.

"About the only injuries I have received are a fractured skull, a hole in the cheek, a crushed nose, broken shoulder blades, crushed ribs, a splintered arm, a broken leg and a crushed foot," he said once, smilingly.

"And I've lost enough skin to paper a flat, but I'm still whole and able to do my turns and I like it," he went on.

Center of Paper Making May Shift

Pulp of South Found to Be Satisfactory, Says U.S. Forester

WASHINGTON.—Further progress in experiments which promise to shift the center of American paper making from Canada to Maine to the forests of the South is reported in the annual bulletin issued by Robert Y. Stuart, forester of the United States Department of Agriculture.

"Unless all signs fail," Mr. Stuart says, "the results of laboratory research on pulping of Southern woods soon will find important application in large-scale commercial developments. Interest in this field is running high."

A few months the government-owned forest products laboratory at Madison, Wis., made an announcement which attracted wide attention; namely, that on slash pine free of heartwood the commercial sulphate process yields a pulp satisfactory in the making of white paper. Heartwood makes its appearance in slash pine at about 30 years.

Since this announcement, the forest products laboratory has developed a new pulping process which "effectively eliminates the requirement" of resin-free wood in paper making. "The process consists of 'semi-chemical' impregnation of the wood with sodium sulphate and sodium bicarbonate, followed by ordinary calcium sulphate cooking."

"Applied to resinous longleaf and slash pines," the forester said, "it produces a strong bleachable pulp comparable in quality to standard sulphate. The horizon of usefulness as paper making material not only for Southern pines but also for a large group of Northern and Western species will be indefinitely widened if the new process, so successful experimentally, proves adaptable in practice."

In commenting upon the experiments with slash pine, Mr. Stuart says: "It was demonstrated this year that the commercial sulphate process gives satisfactory pulps from slash pine free of heartwood and earlier investigations have shown that ground-wood pulp of satisfactory color and average strength can be produced from young slash pine with reasonable power expenditure. While rapid growth of the tree is eminently desirable for maximum volumes of pulps, late studies have shown that as a rule slow-grown material yields pulps of somewhat higher strength. Some compromise between extremes of growth is therefore in order."

Familiar with paper making and with the government experiments discussed above vision a possible solution of the South's problem of cutting over timber lands through the growing of slash pine for use as pulp wood.

Britain Withdraws From Airship Field

Germany and U. S. Alone as No Other Country Building Ships

LONDON.—When very shortly the clatter of hammers and the flare of torches reduces airship R-100 to neat piles of junk, it will mark the end of England's proud forty million dollar dream of leading the world in airships.

It will mean more than that. It will mean that England has definitely gone out of the airship game.

It will leave to the United States the definite championship in naval airships and to Germany the definite championship in commercial airships. Other countries are not in it and never have been.

A Sad Salvage
The end of the chapter was definitely written when the British government made the brief announcement that it had given the contract to a firm of metal dealers to break up the R-100 at Cardington where she is moored.

The ship cost about $2,500,000. The price for which the metal in her was sold was not mentioned, but it probably does not exceed $250,000. The government is retaining the gas bags.

A small part of the metal will be retained and out of this souvenirs will be made for sale. The balance of the duralumin framework will go to the successful bidders. They expect to get some 54 tons of metal. For a time the British government hoped to sell the R-100 to the United States government, but nothing came of it.

Persistent Ill Luck
England has had more bad than good luck with airships. In 1919 the R-34, built according to plans gathered by British engineers from German Zeppelins brought down during the World War, crashed the British people by being the first to cross the Atlantic. In July, 1919, she flew to New York in 108 hours and came back in 75. In 1921 she was wrecked at Howden. And from that time on most of the breaks were against the British. There were a number of mishaps, one of the worst being with the R-38 which the government built for sale to the United States Navy. August 24, 1921, she broke in two and fell in flames while she was on a trial flight over England. Commander Campbell, her constructor, and a crew of young American naval officers and men were in her and 44 of them perished.

There was a pause for some time and then several years ago the British entered upon a grand scheme of airship building. Simultaneously the R-100 and the R-101 were constructed. Their cost, together with giant air sheds and mooring masts, ran up to about ten million dollars. The R-100 was designed for passenger trans-Atlantic flight between Britain and the United States and Canada, if it could be proved to be commercially successful.

For in order.
Persons familiar with paper making and with the government experiments discussed above vision a possible solution of the South's problem of cutting over timber lands through the growing of slash pine for use as pulp wood.

Nevada's Capital Hopes for First Movie Theater

CARSON CITY, Nev.—(P)—Being the only state capital in the country without a movie theater doesn't appeal to Carson City. The chamber of commerce seeks a remedy.

A new show house for Nevada's capital city has been discussed regularly since the old opera house burned down several years ago.

some coin no matter how small. The present famous Graf Zeppelin was completed in 1928 and on October 1 left for the United States with 40 crew and 12 passenger, reaching Lakehurst in 11 1/2 hours. She has made more than 90 flights in all, has flown over 150,000 miles, and been in the air more than 2300 flying hours, thus being the most successful airship in history.

The United States has had its share of bad luck, but keeps right on. The Shenandoah was wrecked in 1933 during a squall over Ohio and 14 of her crew of 42 were killed. The airship, Roma, bought from the Italian army works, exploded in 1922 after being fitted with new American engines and 35 of her crew were killed.

But next to the famous German Zep, the most successful airship in the world is the Los Angeles, which belongs to the American navy. Built in 1924 and known as the LZ-126, she was delivered to the U. S. by Germany as a reparations payment. Not only was she safely flown to the United States, but her total mileage is well over 120,000. The recent completion and trial flights of the enormous Akron, the biggest ever built, of course, puts America definitely beside Germany in the airship game.

Germany possessed in the Zeppelin works at Friedrichshafen, the oldest airship plant in the world. It was founded in 1900 and regularly turned out Zepps until after the war, when for a time its activities were curtailed by the peace treaties. Later restrictions were removed and work was resumed. The Zepps had their tragedies, but the Germans kept right at it. September 10, 1913, the L-1 was wrecked over Helligoland and 15 of her crew were killed. On October 16 of the same year the L-2 exploded at Berlin and 28 of her crew were killed. Of course a considerable number were brought down by the British during the World War when Zepps came to England on bomb dropping expeditions.

People's Pennies Build GrGaf
Resumption of work on a big scale was only made possible in 1925 when the German people contributed over 2,000,000 marks to what was known as the Zeppelin-Eckener fund. In the streets of every city and town in the Reich people had coin boxes in which every passer-by was asked to drop

Decrease in Arkansas Employment Is Slight

LITTLE ROCK—(P)—Less than one per cent decrease in employment in Arkansas during November is shown in the monthly industrial report of the state bureau of labor issued Saturday by W. A. Bookberry, commissioner.

The report is based on information received from 438 mercantile and industrial firms employing 14,891 workers and with a combined weekly payroll of $246,495.59.

The decrease in employment was eight-tenths of one per cent below the report for October in the number of workers and .27 per cent in payroll. The average weekly pay check now is $16.75 compared with $17.31 last month and $22.31 two years ago.

The report said the fact that the increase in unemployment is almost stopped is encouraging. The report contained a list of building and construction projects, under way or contemplated which will involve a total outlay of about $3,189,000.

Black Capitalized on Name in Trade

Local Service Station Makes Remarkable Growth in 2 Years

When Hollis Luck entered the service station business here two years ago he believed there was something in the name.

He called his station, "Luck Junction," and he planned a highway service station for future years. He was on the slogan "Change Luck Junction."

And that motorists do pay attention to advertising and sound service, testified by Hollis Luck's outstanding success in two short years. His business has grown into a five-pump service station, one of the largest gasoline retail units in this section, and he has a modern checker and battery recharging equipment.

Mr. Luck is a native of Prescott, Ark., moved to Hope five years ago, and the first of 1930 opened his present station on Division street. It has grown to that today the station employs 15 persons, covering day and night shifts.

Gasoline and oils are sold by the gallon, together with Seiberling tires and storage batteries. The air-conditioned feature of these tires is emphasized, and Exide's veteran position among automobile batteries makes it one of the best-known names in the automotive world.

The motor supply business continues to improve, Mr. Luck said. Although there was a slight drop in gasoline sales, November against October, the drop was much less than the seasonal decline to be expected. This November nearly equalled October, where November last year ran far behind, said Mr. Luck.

Rail Wage Reduction Is Rapped by Council

CHICAGO—(P)—The general council of the Railway labor organizations that have been asked to accept 10 per cent wage cuts declared Saturday that further reductions of wages are further crimes against humanity.

Although not attempting to predict what the labor unions would do when they meet here December 8, Donald R. Richberg, counsel for the Railroad Labor Executives' Association, said there was no law under which a railway worker can be compelled to do any part of his wages to charity.

Well-Fed Corn Resists Cold Like 'Plump' Man

BLOOMINGTON, Ill.—(P)—Well-fed corn, like well-fed men, is better able to withstand the rigors of winter. Government plant breeders, producing artificial frost with a portable refrigerator, found that immature corn in untreated soil was killed in a few minutes at a temperature of 33 to 34 degrees Fahrenheit.

The same strains given plant food showed no ill effects from four hours exposure to 30 degrees temperature.

Road Fee Is Spurned by State

VALLEJO, Cal.—"If a bicyclist uses the highways, he does so as a legitimate user. And as a legitimate user, he should pay his share toward their maintenance."

So reasoned C. G. J. Wolfe, a retired machinist of Vallejo. But he went further than reasoning. He sent a check for $1 to the California Department of Motor Vehicles.

"It is from one who wishes to pay his little bit for benefits received," Wolfe's letter explained. "I have gone about 4200 miles on my bicycle."

"At two cents per gallon, and a consumption rate approximately one gallon of gasoline per 100 miles, I would owe 84 cents. But I hope by the first of the year to get in the full mileage that $1 at two cents per gallon would give."

Furthermore, although his bicycle uses no gasoline, Wolfe announced his intention of contributing every year.

The registrar's office of the state motor vehicle department was somewhat puzzled. There is no provision for collecting a "gas tax" from horses, bicycles or other highway users that use no gasoline. And there is no authority for acceptance of a fee from a bicycle rider.

So Russell Bevans, acting registrar, returned the $1 check to Wolfe, explaining the reason, but commending his sense of justice and honesty.

"This is no conscientious payment," avers Wolfe, who impresses one more as an educator than a machinist. "I want also to establish myself in my own mind as a legitimate user of the highways."

"When I first started riding for my health, several times discourteous motorists crowded me off the highway intentionally. Twice I was injured by being sideswiped."

"Twenty years' work at a machinist's bench resulted in a peculiar body disorder—a feeling of atrophy in his legs and abdominal muscles. For years he used rigid diet. A couple of years ago he went in for gymnasium work and then for motorcycling."

Over a year ago he switched to bicycling. Occasionally he rides 50 miles a day. He figures his bicycle mileage at 4400.

The fact that he is not a contributor for use of the highways is not his fault.
